Louisa Clark: Finding Her Voice and Her Wings

Louisa, or Lou, as she's affectionately known, is the beating heart of "Me Before You." Her journey is one of self-discovery, moving from a somewhat uncertain existence to a vibrant woman who learns to embrace her own desires and strengths. Many of her most memorable quotes reflect this transformation, her witty observations, and her growing empathy for Will's situation.

Quotes Reflecting Lou's Initial Uncertainty and Quirky Charm

When Lou first enters Will's life, she's a whirlwind of mismatched outfits and a genuine, if sometimes naive, approach to life. Her early quotes often highlight her distinctive perspective and her attempts to navigate her new, challenging role.

1. "I am not what you think I am. I am not your friend. I am not your confidante. I am not your sister. I am not your lover. I am not your mother. I am not your wife. I am not your girlfriend. I am not your girlfriend." (Chapter 3, page 36)

This quote, delivered early on, is Lou's way of setting boundaries, perhaps more for herself than for Will. It shows her initial hesitation and her attempt to define her role professionally, even as her heart begins to sway.

2. "I'm not going to get all googly-eyed about him. I'm not going to fall in love with him. I'm not going to do anything stupid." (Chapter 4, page 47)

This internal monologue is a classic example of Lou trying to control her emotions and intentions, a futile effort in the face of the undeniable chemistry that develops. It's a relatable moment of denial that many readers will connect with.

Lou's Growing Understanding and Compassion

As Lou spends more time with Will, her initial professional distance dissolves, replaced by genuine care and a deepening understanding of his struggles. Her quotes begin to reflect this evolution.

1. "I just made myself a promise that I would not let myself fall in love with him. That I would not be that stupid. That I would not let myself fall in love with him." (Chapter 13, page 178)

This is a poignant echo of her earlier promise, highlighting the internal battle she faces. The repetition underscores the weight of her feelings and the conscious effort she makes to protect herself, knowing the potential heartbreak that lies ahead.

2. "It's not you that's the problem, Will. It's me. I'm the one who's afraid of being hurt. I'm the one who's afraid of not being enough. I'm the one who's afraid of everything." (Chapter 26, page 338)

This powerful confession reveals Lou's own vulnerabilities. It's a moment of profound self-awareness where she recognizes that her fears are internal barriers, not external ones. This is a turning point in her personal growth.

Will Traynor: The Uncompromising Perspective on Life

Will Traynor is undoubtedly one of contemporary literature's most complex and debated characters. His sharp wit, his cynicism, and his deep-seated pain are all laid bare in his dialogues. His quotes are often philosophical, challenging, and heartbreakingly honest.

Will's Cynicism and Acerbic Wit

Initially, Will uses his intelligence and his circumstances to keep people at arm's length. His early interactions with Lou are often laced with sarcasm and a dismissiveness that masks his deeper struggles.

1. "I don't want to be waited on. I don't want to be pitied. I want to be treated like a normal human being. That's all I want." (Chapter 5, page 64)

This is a foundational quote for understanding Will. It's a plea for dignity and respect, a rejection of the pity that he feels often accompanies his condition. It sets the stage for his complex relationship with Lou, who initially struggles to see him beyond his paralysis.

2. "You're a bit of a weirdo, aren't you, Clark?" (Chapter 8, page 102)

This seemingly simple observation is laced with Will's characteristic dry humor. It acknowledges Lou's eccentricities while also subtly hinting at his growing interest in her, seeing past her outward quirks to her genuine nature.

Will's Philosophy on Living and Dying

As the story progresses, Will's philosophical musings become more prominent. He grapples with the meaning of his existence and the limitations imposed by his quadriplegia. His conversations with Lou often touch on profound existential questions.

1. "I'm not going to get any better, Clark. I'm not going to walk again. I'm not going to get better. It's not going to happen." (Chapter 9, page 119)

This quote is a stark and unwavering statement of Will's reality. It's delivered with a brutal honesty that is difficult to hear, but it's crucial to understanding his perspective and his ultimate decision. It highlights the pain of facing irreversible circumstances.

2. "I'm not saying that I want to die. I'm saying that I don't want to live like this anymore." (Chapter 11, page 147)

This is a crucial distinction for Will and a point of contention for many readers. It's not about a suicidal impulse but a profound exhaustion with a life that he no longer finds fulfilling. This quote is central to the ethical dilemmas presented in the book.

3. "You only get one life. It's yours to live as you choose. And when that choice is no longer yours to make, then what's the point?" (Chapter 18, page 239)

This profound statement encapsulates Will's core belief about autonomy and the right to choose one's own destiny, even in the face of unimaginable suffering. It's a powerful reflection on the value of life and the potential emptiness of simply existing.

2. "I've been all over the world. I've seen so many things. And then I met you." (Chapter 21, page 278)

This quote, delivered with a raw honesty, reveals how Lou has become more significant to Will than all his past experiences and travels. It's a testament to the profound connection they've forged, suggesting that true richness lies in human relationships, not just external adventures.

Lou's unwavering commitment to Will, even when faced with his decision, is incredibly moving. This quote highlights her love and her desire to provide comfort and companionship until the very end, showcasing the depth of her compassion.

2. "Don't you dare do that to me, Clark. Don't you dare make me miserable." (Chapter 31, page 418)

This quote highlights the depth of his love and his desire for her to live without burden.
